

Do you want to spend a day finding out how you can pick up some extra marks at Icelandic sport competitions? Do you want to know how judges come to their decisions? Is it the horse or the rider they look at first? Are gaits more important than the connection between horse and rider?

If you would like to know the answer to these and other judging related questions then come along to Ladykirk Stables, near Norham on Saturday, 19th January (from 10am until 3pm) where International Judge, Fi Pugh will lead you through a theory based session on the judges guidelines and marking system, firewalls, equipment checks and anything else that can catch out the unwary or just unlucky horse and rider.

To book your place please let Yvonne know on tweedicelandic@gmail.com. - numbers may be restricted depending on the level of interest.

£25 for members and £35 for non-members, includes tea & coffee but please bring your own lunch.
